

WORKINGRITE IN PARTNERSHIP WITH CENTRESTAGE.

We are excited to partner with 'WorkingRite' who support 16-24 year olds across Scotland with paid work experience and employment opportunities. The initiative is funded by the Hunter Foundation and the project combines the knowledge and experience of both organisations to create a unique, holistic employability support service to young people aged 16-24 years.

Paul Montgomery is the WorkingRite Youth Employability Coordinator based at Centrestage and is keen to meet with and help more young people in need of support into the working environment. Paul works with the young folks, delivering tailored induction sessions to get them ready for a work placement. Each young person is individually matched to a local business like yours for work placements of up to 12 weeks.

Many youngsters can find it difficult to get their foot in the door – either through lack of experience, poor school grades, or general obstacles in life. They just need someone to give them that crucial first chance and some support to get them used to working life.

The WorkingRite programme is all about learning on-the-job, one-to-one. Their aim is to get young people onto the right path and into jobs, apprenticeships or college places, securing a better future for them and making them feel part (and proud) of their community.

Paul is not only keen to support young people, but also the business community who would be able to support a young person with work experience or employment.
